

Abu Tig Marina, El Gouna

Maritime Hospitality at its Best

Drop anchor in El Gouna, where two marinas and a pristine harbor town offer seafarers the Red Sea's best in service, comfort and style. Boasting multiple marinas, comprehensive services, and an aesthetically unified harbor town designed by Italian architect Alfredo Freda, El Gouna has quickly become a favorite docking place for pleasure craft traversing the Red Sea. A designated International Point of Entry, Abu Tig is in a league of its own among Red Sea marinas both for the high standard of services it provides as well as for its matchless backdrop: a harbor town that is not only architecturally praiseworthy but also offers El Gouna's most exclusive shopping and dining. A number of lodging options are also available in the marina, which houses hotels ranging from intimate inns to a four-star beachfront establishment.

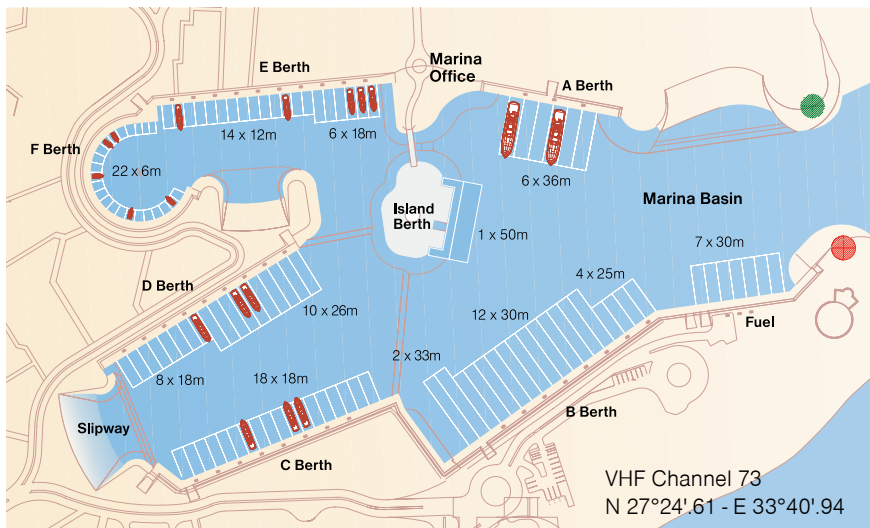

Abu Tig serves both as a final destination and as a stop-over point for vessels traveling onwards to the Mediterranean Sea or the Indian Ocean. It is a popular winter base, where sailors can make the most of a reasonable cost of living, and it is also a harbor of choice for the Med-Red, Vasco de Gama, and Blue Water international yacht rallies. The expansion of the existing marina is already underway. A new and larger North Basin was started early in 2006 and will be finished in 2008. This new extension will cater to the rapidly-expanding mega yacht market by offering berthing for vessels up to 60 meters in length.

Abydos, El Gouna's second marina, has a capacity of 40 vessels and harbors El Gouna's many diving boats. It offers dry dock and repair services with a ship lift for vessels up to 19 meters, and has a diesel fuel station, electricity lines, channel-6 VHF and a maintenance center.
